

INTERNATIONAL CONFERENCE ON SUSTAINABLE DEVELOPMENT CONFERENCE REPORT

CONFERENCE REPORT: The International Conference on Sustainable Development was held in Rio de Janeiro, Brazil, in June 1992. The conference was the first of its kind, bringing together representatives from over 170 countries to discuss the challenges of sustainable development. The conference resulted in the adoption of the Agenda 21, a comprehensive plan of action for the 21st century. The conference also resulted in the adoption of the Rio Declaration on Environment and Development, which sets out the principles of sustainable development.

The conference was organized by the United Nations Development Programme (UNDP) and the World Commission on Environment and Development (WCED). The conference was held in Rio de Janeiro, Brazil, from June 3 to June 14, 1992. The conference was the first of its kind, bringing together representatives from over 170 countries to discuss the challenges of sustainable development.

The conference was a landmark event in the history of international development. It was the first time that representatives from all major world powers were present at a conference on development. The conference was also the first time that representatives from the Global South were present in large numbers. The conference was a landmark event in the history of international development.

The conference was a landmark event in the history of international development. It was the first time that representatives from all major world powers were present at a conference on development. The conference was also the first time that representatives from the Global South were present in large numbers. The conference was a landmark event in the history of international development.

The conference was a landmark event in the history of international development. It was the first time that representatives from all major world powers were present at a conference on development. The conference was also the first time that representatives from the Global South were present in large numbers. The conference was a landmark event in the history of international development.

